If you're one of the more artsy people out there and would like to express yourself in a unique and memorable fashion, you could start creating comics. These modern types of stories rely very much on the depictions of various happenings. It's a great way to test your skills in storytelling and artful depictions. One tool you could have by your side in such a scenario is Comic Life, a comic creator that gives users templates and many other tools to adjust them to perfection. The application is friendly Once you launch the program, a sense of familiarity will hit you. The app is indeed created to suit both beginners and more advanced users. You'll be required to choose a template that will act as the base of your illustrated novel. From here, you're set to follow a journey through various adjustments and changes you might want to make to the comic strip to feel more like you and less like a general idea. A spelling checker is included, of course. One can import pictures to the template, adjust and integrate new elements for a more original feel. You can choose between various fonts that perfectly imitate the comic style. There are plenty of areas to adjust in each template. Rulers and other instruments are included for precise calculations in terms of managing the space you have at hand. All imaginable colors When it comes to changing the colors, not just the template style, you should rest assured knowing there is a color picking tool that allows one to basically create any shade possible. Play with the brightness and opacity levels for an extra level of detail. This application seems to perfectly combine both, art-oriented and grammar tools, giving you the help you need on either side of your future comic.
